Child Support and Taxes

Start today's role play with the Maureen and Steve scenario from Day 1, plus the info below.

Steve earns $20/hr and works 40 hours/wk. Maureen earns $25/hr and works 40 hours/wk. Maureen insures the children. The cost for family is $900/mo and employee only is $200/mo.

With their current court order where Steve has the children every Thursday overnight and every other weekend (Friday, Sat and Sunday nights), which totals 5 overnights every two weeks or 130 overnights per year (5 x 26). Assume this schedule is not changing.

Oddly, they never had the court determine Basic Child Support, Medical Support or Childcare Support and they want to negotiate this now in mediation. The their older child, Paul, is starting hockey and they want to figure out how to divide the costs associated with that sport and to "reserve" Basic Child Support. Childcare costs $500 per week total for both children.

Mediate dividing responsibility for childcare costs.

Mediate dividing kids medical insurance and out of pocket medical costs.

Mediate dividing hockey expenses without using the calculator.

Mediate (assume using guidelines calculator) for childcare, insurance and basic support.
